

Funding, Competing Interests, and Availability

Funding	None. The project ran on free-tier services and public data; total direct cost: zero.
Competing interests	The authors declare none. No entity with a financial or institutional interest in legal prediction technology funded, reviewed, or approved this work.
Human subjects	Not applicable. The study uses public judicial records (published opinions and coded vote data); no human-subjects data were collected.
Data availability	All code, frozen artifacts, sealed predictions, and audit reports are public at github.com/Vitalcheffe/legally-subjective (release tags a1-freeze, m4-freeze, m4-exam).
Institutional note	The authors' affiliation (Lycée français international Louis-Massignon, Bouskoura-Casablanca, Morocco) is stated for identification only and does not imply endorsement of the research by the school or any network to which it belongs.

These statements are the same as those printed in the Declarations section of the manuscript (revision 3). They are reproduced as a standalone document because several venues collect declarations in separate fields rather than inside the manuscript. If a submission system splits these items across multiple form fields, each row above maps to exactly one field; none of the wording needs to change.
