

Ghali El Alj

Bouskoura–Casablanca, Morocco · [EMAIL À COMPLÉTER] · [TÉLÉPHONE À COMPLÉTER]

SOURCE: Curriculum vitae — prepared for the Legally Subjective submission package, October 2026. No academic title; no professional status claimed.

Education

Lycée français international Louis-Massignon, Bouskoura–Casablanca (Morocco) — French national curriculum, homologated AEFÉ establishment. Currently in Première (2026–2027).

Research experience

Legally Subjective — independent interdisciplinary research project (2026). Legal research lead. Framed the jurisprudential question (can judicial subjectivity be predicted from the public record?); performed the doctrinal reading of the 793-document opinion corpus; carried out the case-law research and citation verification across the 569-case corpus (Supreme Court Database coding conventions, CourtListener records); interpreted the results against the attitudinal model of judicial behavior and the literature on legal prediction; co-developed and co-revised the 23-page manuscript. The project and its replication package are public at github.com/Vitalcheffe/legally-subjective.

Research skills

- U.S. case-law research and doctrinal reading (opinions, concurrences, dissents).
- Citation verification and Bluebook citation conventions.
- Empirical legal research: Supreme Court Database vote coding, case selection windows, consolidated-matter handling.
- French and English legal terminology; comparative reading of French and U.S. legal materials.

Languages

French (native) · English (fluent) · Arabic.

Publications

None prior to this manuscript. Legally Subjective: How Much Vote Predictability Survives a Strong Ideological Baseline? (working paper, revision 3, October 2026) is the authors' first research manuscript.

Areas marked [BRACKETS] must be completed with real contact data before any use. This CV deliberately claims no awards, no internships and no titles that the author does not hold.