

Amine Harch El Korane

Bouskoura–Casablanca, Morocco · [EMAIL À COMPLÉTER] · [TÉLÉPHONE À COMPLÉTER]

SOURCE: Curriculum vitae — prepared for the Legally Subjective submission package, October 2026. No academic title; no professional status claimed.

Education

Lycée français international Louis-Massignon, Bouskoura–Casablanca (Morocco) — French national curriculum, homologated AEFÉ establishment. Currently in Première (2026–2027).

Research experience

Legally Subjective — independent interdisciplinary research project (2026). Computational lead and reproducibility engineer. Designed and implemented the complete experimental pipeline on public data: a frozen, hash-chained corpus of 569 argued U.S. Supreme Court cases and 4,569 coded votes (Supreme Court Database, CourtListener); pre-registered per-justice ideological baselines; QLoRA persona adapters fine-tuned for thirteen justices; the sealed-exam machinery for fifty hash-frozen 5–4 decisions, with predictions locked before the answer key existed; exact McNemar tests and bootstrap intervals; zero-leak audits. The full replication package is public at github.com/Vitalcheffe/legally-subjective (release tags a1-freeze, m4-freeze, m4-exam).

Technical skills

- Python for data analysis (pandas, scikit-learn).
- LLM fine-tuning workflow: Hugging Face transformers, PEFT, QLoRA adapters, free-tier GPU sessions.
- Git and GitHub: versioned provenance, release tags, continuous-integration audits.
- Statistics for paired experiments: exact McNemar, bootstrap confidence intervals, Spearman correlation.
- Reproducible-research practice: hash-chained artifacts, pre-registration, sealed evaluation protocols.
- Bash; LaTeX typesetting.

Languages

French (native) · English (fluent) · Arabic.

Publications

None prior to this manuscript. Legally Subjective: How Much Vote Predictability Survives a Strong Ideological Baseline? (working paper, revision 3, October 2026) is the authors' first research manuscript.

Areas marked [BRACKETS] must be completed with real contact data before any use. This CV deliberately claims no awards, no internships and no titles that the author does not hold.